

Professionals in ancient Western & Central Asian studies nowadays include a few thousand scholars, doctoral students, and post graduates specializing in archaeology from the Palaeolithic to the end of the Achaemenid dynasty. Yet there exists no international association to represent them and to forward their goals and aspirations..

We believe that time has come to create an international professional association, with a geographical scope extending from the Eastern Mediterranean to the Pamir, and from the Black and Caspian Seas to the Gulf of Aden.

This association should be inclusive and defend the interests of the discipline in its widest sense: archaeology, cultural anthropology, history and philology, art history, bioarchaeology, geoarchaeology, heritage studies, archaeometry and technology, physics applied to archaeology, radiocarbon and other dating methods, all disciplines which should be engaged together in a renewed and fruitful dialogue.

We are therefore proposing the establishment of an International Association for Archaeological Research in Western & Central Asia (ARWA).

« International » implies that venues of the biennial ARWA conferences (alternately with the ICAANE venues) would occur anywhere. « Association » entails the creation of an organization made up of a paid membership that has the right and opportunity to elect its own leadership as well as to develop plans and programming of every event, workshop, or conference it would organize. Faithful representation of such a community of archaeologists would require a democratically elected and time-limited Executive Board or Steering Committee with a fair gender, interregional and intergenerational composition.

The aim of the Association is to establish a worldwide link between scholars, to defend the discipline and its members, to provide a number of services: information, mentoring, encouraging joint projects, providing online teaching, advising international organizations. It will organize a biennial Congress and will promote a series of interdisciplinary regional and transregional Workshops.

The way it might be created and structured should arise from a broad consensus between its members following a thorough debate between all interested colleagues. We therefore invite colleagues to join and explore with us diverse avenues via an online platform. If you wish to participate in this discussion or receive further information, please forward your interest through the website or the email links given below.
