I am assistant professor at Salahaddin University I get my PhD in Microbial immunology in 2008 from Babylon University, Hela, Iraq. I have worked in many different positions in the field of teaching, Immunology theory, Virology theory, Supervising Immunology and Virology Practical Laboratory, Teaching Advanced Immunology for Graduate student, and Supervised MSc and PhD student. In 2010 I was honored to be among the 25 Iraqi university staff that have been selected to visit the USA through Fulbright Visiting Program for faculty development and capacity building. In 2011, I was accepted as a research fellow at George Mason University-Prince William Campus in Molecular and Microbiology Laboratory in the USA to study HIV virus. My native language is Kurdish and all my education was in Arabic then my Arabic language actually equal to my native. I get my English language from school, university, my master degree, and my PhD degree, conversation classes in AMADEST and Fulbright Visiting Scholar Program to Gorge Mason University in USA to develop my capacity as a Educational faculty in university and gains all experience including the English language.

As a university professor I have good experience in research field and supervising research projects.

In addition, it may be of interest to know that I am a fast learner person with creative thinking, have the determination to get things done.
